This month sees London host the annual Photo London fair which means the city comes alive with strong photography shows from large and small galleries alike. Those I am planning trips to – as well as the fair itself include:

Casper Sejersen: One, Two, Three, Four at Cob Gallery from May 11 – June 15, 2019

I have long admired Casper Sejersen's work, and also been lucky enough to meet him through Danish friends and creative projects. Showing different bodies of work both at Photo London and within the gallery's Camden space, One, Two, Three, Four is his debut exhibition and body of personal work. I think of Sejersen's vision as dream-like and painterly, but there is often a dark and more curious layer to his creative output. It's this tension which Sejersen is brilliant at documenting.
